The letter may also include your credit score on record at the bureau used to retrieve your score. Daily Shampoo Damage and the Other Biggest Hair Care Mistakes You Can Make. What is a Credit Card? A credit card is a wallet-sized plastic card that is issued by banks and retailers which give the owners the ability to purchase whatever goods they want within their given credit limit, even if they don't have enough money. They essentially borrow money from the bank for the time being, which the owner will, in turn, have to pay back within a given time frame, usually within 25-30 days. Easy, right? Hold on. Before rushing out and finding numerous credit cards that you want to apply for and going on a crazy shopping spree, there are a few things to consider. The Credit Card Cost. Keep careful records of those with whom you are exchanging Christmas and holiday cards each year. Get Down to Business: Tips for Working from Home Effectively. One of the questions on the credit card application will ask for information about your yearly or monthly income. Most of the time, credit card companies won't fact check this information, but it's wise to be honest about your income, not just for the creditor's sake, but for your own. If you're already struggling to make ends meet, getting a new credit card could prompt you to spend money you can't afford to pay back, and that's never a good idea. You can always speak to a financial counselor for additional guidance prior to applying.

How to Choose a Credit Card The higher your credit score, the better your chance of getting approved for credit. High scores allow you to be more selective about your choice of credit card. If your credit is in the good range or above, make sure you pay close attention to details and choose a card that doesn't have a high (or any) yearly fee and that has a competitive APR (annual percentage rate). For reference, a good APR today is generally below 17.57%, according to the Federal Reserve, but credit card rates tend to continuously increase over time.

What Do Credit Card Companies Care About? The main factor used in determining whether an applicant is approved for a credit card is the person's credit score. Before you apply, you can ask for a free copy of your credit report and your score from each of the three main credit reporting agencies: Experian, Equifax and TransUnion. According to the Fair Credit Reporting Act, you are entitled to a free copy of your report from each agency every 12 months. However, you can also get an estimate of your score at any time from other free or low-cost services, such as Credit Karma.
