Corbin showed off his favorite word Tuesday when he got into a playful argument with Tyler Mayor Don Warren as he made the official 2022 Miracle TEEN announcement at the Goodman-LeGrand House and Museum on Broadway Avenue. "Corbin, are you going to be ready to light the Christmas tree Thursday night? Don't you say no. Are you ready to see the Christmas parade?" Warren asked. With lots of laughter and a big grin, the boy gave a big "no!" Warren added, "I can't wait to see you light the tree, and I'll see you Thursday." To which, Corbin gave another "no." Craig and Dania Robinson said their son Corbin is a true blessing and that they couldn't believe he was chosen. "Never in our wildest dreams would we have thought Corbin would have been chosen. Because to us, Corbin is no different than any other TEEN," Craig Robinson said. "Yes, he has Down syndrome, but it has never stopped him from doing what he wants and when he wants to do it." A Miracle TEEN, like Corbin, has lit the city's Christmas tree since 1987, and the lighting serves as a kickoff to the local Christmas season, Warren said. "That's a long time, and being born and raised in Tyler, I've attended the Christmas parade since I was a little TEEN and I've watched the tree being lit year after year," Warren said. "It's almost an emotional thing— you see these TEENren light the tree. It's a big deal. It really is a kickoff to the season." Born 37 weeks into his mother's pregnancy and weighing over 7 pounds, Corbin was unexpectedly diagnosed with Down syndrome. His parents said they loved him immediately as the miracle he is. N.J.
