A person who is genuinely into wine knows that the beverage is full of sulfites— as a preservative— that can alter the flavor. Luckily, technology in the world of wine is advancing in that department thanks to Üllo. Üllo is a company that makes a wine purifier that promises to filter out all the sulfites. The best thing about giving the gift of an interesting wine holder is that the more interesting it is, the less likely it is that your recipient will already have something similar. Even if they do have another style, switching the holders out once in a while will give their kitchen a dash of variety. What a fun gift idea for a wine-loving friend! While your recipient is sure to get a hearty laugh out of it at first, they will eventually realize that wine condoms are actually quite useful.
