The estimated population in 2007 was 25,505, [5]. increasing to 27,445 at the 2011 census. As of 2018, [6]. The Town Hall, home to Stratford-upon-Avon Town Council. Stratford was within the West Midlands Region constituency of the European Parliament which was represented by seven Members of the European Parliament (MEPs). [33]. and 270 homes on the Loxley Road. [49]. A survey of 1251-52 uses the name Stratford for the first time to identify Old Stratford and the newer manors. [12]. During Stratford's early expansion into a town, the only access across the River Avon into and out of the town was over a wooden bridge, thought to have been constructed in 1318. However, the bridge could not be crossed at times due to the river rising and was described by antiquarian John Leland as "a poor bridge of timber and no causey [causeway] to it, whereby many poor folks and other refused to come to Stratford when Avon was up, or coming thither stood in jeopardy of life." In 1480, a new masonry arch bridge was built to replace it called Clopton Bridge, named after Hugh Clopton who paid for its construction. The new bridge made it easier for people to trade within Stratford and for passing travellers to stay in the town. [12]. David Garrick helped Stratford to become a tourist destination. The town's population is set to increase over the next few years following government approval to build 800 new homes in Shottery, which also includes plans for a new relief road, [46]. A surviving remnant of this is the Tramway Bridge over the Avon, a brick arch bridge which now carries pedestrians. [29]. Victorian Stratford's growth as a tourist destination was further enhanced by Edward Fordham Flower and his son Charles Edward Flower, owners of a local brewery business, and important figures in local affairs: Through their campaigning and fundraising efforts, the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre was opened on the banks of the Avon in 1879. [13]. Many of the town's earliest and most important buildings are located along what is known as Stratford's Historic Spine, which was once the main route from the town centre to the parish church. The route of the Historic Spine begins at Shakespeare's Birthplace in Henley Street. It continues through Henley Street to the top end of Bridge Street and into High Street where many Elizabethan buildings are located, including Harvard House. The route carries on through Chapel Street where Nash's House and New Place are sited. The Historic Spine continues along Church Street where Guild buildings are located dating back to the 15th century, as well as 18th- and 19th-century properties. The route then finishes in Old Town, which includes Hall's Croft and the Holy Trinity Church. [16]. It is close to the northern edge of the Cotswolds, with Chipping Campden 10 miles (16 km) to the south. Suburbs and areas of the town include Shottery, Bishopton, Bridge Town, Tiddington, and Old Town. [12]. Clopton Bridge allowed trade to flourish in Stratford. The town is a popular tourist destination owing to its status as the birthplace and gravesite of playwright and poet William Shakespeare, and receives approximately 2.5 million visitors a year. [8]. View of the River Avon from the Royal Shakespeare Theatre. Stratford is a major English tourist town due to it being the birthplace of William Shakespeare, whom many consider the greatest playwright o. Stratford-upon-Avon Town Council is a parish council, responsible for crime prevention, cemeteries, public conveniences, litter, river moorings, parks, grants via the Town Trust and the selection of the town's mayor. [35]. The regular large influx of tourists is the major source of the town's prosperity, [51]. The Stratford-upon-Avon Town Trust is based in the Civic Hall, Rother Street. [37]. This article is about the town. For the district, see Stratford-on-Avon District. For the constituency, see Stratford-on-Avon (UK Parliament constituency). Stratford was originally inhabited by Britons before Anglo-Saxons and remained a village before the lord of the manor, John of Coutances, set out plans to develop it into a town in 1196. In that same year, Stratford was granted a charter from King Richard I to hold a weekly market in the town, giving it its status as a market town. As a result, Stratford experienced an increase in trade and commerce as well as urban expansion. receiving between 2.5 million and 3 million visitors annually. [8]. which was an increase from 25,505 in 2007. [5]. Both the river and the Roman road served as trade routes for the town. Stratford was also known for its glove making industry, which was at its zenith in the 15th and 16th centuries. William Shakespeare's father John Shakespeare was employed in this trade. [21]. Stratford is 22 miles (35 km) south-east of Birmingham. [15]. Major employers in the town include the NFU Mutual Insurance Company (and Avon Insurance), Amec Foster Wheeler, Sitel, Tesco, Morrisons, Marks & Spencer, B&Q and Pashley Cycles. There are, nominally, three theatres run by the prestigious Royal Shakespeare Company, which attract large audiences and income for the town. The town is the southernmost point of the Arden area on the edge of the Cotswolds. [7]. up to 500 new homes planned in the Bishopton area of the town, [48]. Stratford's new workers established a guild known as the Guild of the Holy Cross for their business and religious requirements. The guild included the most important townsmen, and elected officials to oversee local affairs, they built a Guild Chapel in the 13th century, and a Guildhall in around 1417 on Church Street, which remain as two of Stratford's oldest buildings. The guild also established an educational institution in the late 13th century, which would later become the King Edward VI School. [13]. Stratford's warmest month is July, with an average maximum temperature of 22.8 C (73 F) and January is the coldest month with an average high of 7.4 C (45 F). The average summer maximum temperature is 22.7 C (73 F), with a winter average high of 7.5 C (45 F). [44]. you can quickly and easily access updated branch details for every.
