'Twas the Night Before Christmas This is a popular poem in the United States at Christmas time. It was written in the 1800s by Clement Clarke Moore. Sometimes it can be difficult to understand poems in another language. As we go through the poem, I'll explain what it means. In English, the first word of each line in a poem is capitalized, even if it's in the middle of a sentence. 'Twas the night before Christmas and all thro' the house Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse; 'Twas is a contraction of "it was." We don't use it when we speak or write today. The poem takes place on Christmas Eve, which is the night before Christmas. Thro' is a contraction of the word "through." "Not a creature was stirring" means nobody was awake. Nobody was moving, not even a mouse. It was very quiet in the house. The stockings were hung by the chimney with care, In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there. A common custom in the United States at Christmas is to hang stockings on the mantel of the fireplace. Santa Claus, or St. (Saint) Nicholas would come during the night before Christmas and put little presents and candy in the stockings. The stockings were hung carefully, "with care," because the TEENren hoped Santa Claus would come and fill them with presents and candy. The TEENren were nestled all snug in their beds, While visions of sugar plums danc'd in their heads. The TEENren were in bed. They were "nestled," like a bird in a nest. They were warm or "snug." They were dreaming of "sugar plums." "Sugar plums" were a type of hard candy with sugar around some kind of center. Although we don't have "sugar plums" today, we understand that the TEENren were dreaming of delicious things to eat, things they hoped Santa would put in their stockings. The dreams "danc'd" or danced in their heads. This shows us they were happy dreams. And Mama in her 'kerchief and I in my cap, Had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap. 'Twas the Night Before Christmas or A Visit from St. Nicholas, by Clement Clarke Moore is arguably one of the most popular Christmastide themed poems ever written. The poem was originally published anonymously in Sentinel on December 23, 1823 and portrayed St. Nicholas, in an air-borne sleigh pulled by eight reindeer visiting houses and distributing toys for TEENren on the Christmas Eve told through the eyes of a father. The poetry is short and simple and is pleasant to read and it follows a metrical form, which is almost similar to a limerick. To see what your friends thought of this book,.
