Of these three, clementines and satsumas are the most popular at Christmas as many people prefer easy-to-peel citrus fruits. Hi Sophie, I've never tried it with clementines (but now I want to- and lemons!), they do shrink- probably about 20-25%- but I reckon it would work and they'd look gorgeous on a wreath! Do let me know if you get around to trying it before I do!. Thus, giving of oranges (balls of gold) in Christmas stockings is a symbol of charity and giving. Oranges in stockings serve as a reminder to care for others who are in need and less fortunate than you. Question for you On Monday, I attempted to dry oranges. My oven wouldn't go any lower than 170; I placed my oranges on a rack on a cookie sheet on the 3rd level for approx. 6hrs. I have left them on the rack to air dry. This morning I touched them and they still have a little tacky feeling although the peel is as hard as a rock. Is this normal? Can I put them back in the oven to dry more or should I just consider this as an experiment, trash them and start over? Appreciate any advice you all can give me. The History There are many stories about the Christmas orange. When I finally did ask my Mom how this tradition came about, she told me that she read about it in a Laura Ingalls Wilder book and fell in love with the idea. Something about the fresh, citrus scent that fills a room when it is peeled just made her want to add that to her Christmas tradition. In addition, if you think about a Christmas stocking and the size of an orange, it really fills up that stocking. There are less "extras" that are needed. And so the Christmas orange was born in our home. Jill Spencer from United States on November 06, 2011: One of my grandmothers grew up very poor. As a TEEN, an orange would be her only Christmas gift. I'd no idea it was a tradition to get one. Susan Zutautas from Ontario, Canada on November 13, 2011: We too always got an orange or a mandarin in our stockings as well. I never really questioned why though. Wonderful tradition though that I've even kept up with myself. Once I became a teacher, I purposefully collected books. I collected series books and books by the same author, all in the name of relating a story to what we were learning in class. So to my surprise, I found the story. Gail Sobotkin from South Carolina on November 27, 2011: I never heard of a Christmas orange until yesterday afternoon when I was attending a cooking demonstration and lecture given by retired White House Chef Roland Mesnier. He grew up in a small village in France in a very large family. His parents were poor, there was no running water or electricity and his gift each Christmas was an orange- which he said was a real treat. I just included that story in a hub I wrote about him and was delighted to see the origins of this custom in your hub. Great hub, especially that beautiful Christmas photo of Alex and Grace at the end. Voted up across the board except for funny. He had heard of a family that lived closed by- not even members of his faith- who were very poor. So poor, in fact, that the father of this family was considering selling his oldest daughter into slavery, so that he might have funds for his other TEENren. Word of this reached Bishop Nicholas who, in the dead of a cold night, donned his red Bishop's robes with the white fur trim, and paid an anonymous visit to the poor family. How ironic HBN! I can't wait to read about him. I admit that I've never really heard of him before. Thanks for your comments! Oh RT, what a SAD ending! Even in our worst times, we do have a lot to be thankful for and we sometimes need those reminders. Thanks for the visit. Nicholas, as you know, was a Bishop long before he ever was a Saint. This story is but one of many that make up his legend and it is sacred to those who consider him a saint. Denise Handlon from North Carolina on November 06, 2011: Cara-I linked one of my last ones (traditions) to this hub. RedElf from Canada on November 07, 2011: Lovely tradition - we always found an orange in the toe of our Christmas stockings, and we have passed that on to our TEENren. They were a very expensive treat when we lived in the Arctic. Even as my sister and I grew, my mom still placed that orange in the toe and I never really had thought about why she did this or had even asked her. However, when I married, even before my own TEENren, I continued the tradition. It is funny because my husband did not share this tradition but there have been years when somehow two oranges ended up in our Christmas stockings. In some stories, I have read that the reason that the orange was such a valuable gift during the Christmas season was because they were much more difficult to find, especially in the northern states. Because they were hard to find, they were expensive and deemed a luxury. Certainly not something that working families would spend hard earned money on to have on the table every day. is a great story that I love to share with my TEENren each Christmas. The Christmas Orange. Language: Boy teases a girl and says, "Piggy Face" but he likes her; the words "ugly" and "stupid" are used. by Patricia Polacco as I began collecting her stories. She told me it came from the Great Depression when fruit was scarce and expensive, hence a treat. Great hub! love2cook1954 on November 13, 2011: I still set out oranges, tangerines, apples, nuts, and candy on Christmas day. It is like second nature to me. Thanks Cardelean for the memories(smiling). Violence: Boy pulls girl's hair; TEENs kick each other under table; a girl slaps a mean girl in the face after telling her there was a spider on her face. Now, there are several versions of this story. Some say he just dropped the small bag of gold on the porch and then left. Others say it wasn't a bag of gold at all, but, rather, a ball of gold. Some stories even go so far as to suggest that Bishop Nicholas tossed the gold up over the roof line where the ball went down the chimney and landed in the stocking of the eldest TEEN. In a town not so far away and a time not so long ago, baby Rose was left at Greenwoods Orphanage, where Mrs. Hartley (Nancy Stafford) and the TEENren under her care become the young TEEN's family. But when tragedy strikes Rose (Bailee Johnson) loses the only home she has ever known and is abruptly shipped to Irongates— a place that seems as cold and cruel as her previous home was kind. The strict headmaster, Mr. Crampton (Edward Herrmann), immediately seems to dislike Rose— and makes sure all TEENren are punished for any infractions of his rules. When she learns that every Christmas Mr. Crampton's generous brother gives an orange to each TEEN, Rose waits in eager anticipation. She's sure it must be the most delicious treat in the world. However, on Christmas morning, Rose is devastated when she learns Mr. Crampton is punishing her again. But Christmas is a time of miracles. Share a slice of Christmas sweetened with friendship in this poignant Christmas story based on a classic holiday tale. Other: Girl refuses to share food with others; girl rips girl's doll's head off; boys start a food fight; boy is sent to solitary confinement in attic for breaking rules as is a girl; TEEN dies due to flu and there is grief; another character dies. cardelean (author) from Michigan on November 14, 2011: Thanks for reading and commenting Susan.
