Locals preparing to make the season merry should be ready to open their wallets a little wider when picking out Christmas trees, as area vendors say prices are up and stock is limited. Many local tree vendors that offer pick-your-own trees have either already closed for the season while others— including Smolak Farms in North Andover— say they'll have enough stock for another solid weekend of sales before it'll be nothing but "Charlie Brown"-style varieties left on the lot. "I wish I could find more to sell," said Michael Smolak, who oversees the South Bradford Street family-owned farm.

Farmers insist this year's greenery includes extra fees passed on by necessity. "We're very uncomfortable raising prices the amount we have to," said Stephen Rogers of Bradford's Rogers Spring Hill Garden Center, which he co-owns with his sister Barbara Rogers Scharneck. The family-owned business sells pre-cut Christmas trees, in addition to kissing balls, wreaths and other custom-made pieces, Rogers said. An average 7- to 8-foot tree sells for $70, an estimated 15% increase over last year. Like Smolak, the Rogers family has faced supply issues— having to source trees from Canada when they usually receive them from Pennsylvania and North Carolina. Smolak said prices must "unfortunately" rise 10% to 20% in order to meet rising farming costs. This year's balsam trees at Smolak start at $69, while the frasers begin at $113, according to the company's website, depending on the height of the tree. "It absolutely kills me because I know it is more than I want to charge, but we don't have any choice," Smolak said. For each of these holidays (Easter, Thanksgiving, and Christmas), a continental breakfast is served from 8AM-11AM, and a hot meal is served from 11AM-1PM. A free raffle of gift cards for many local fast food franchises is held from 10:30AM-11AM. Hot meals are also delivered to shut-ins. All attendees can take away a second meal, a bag of canned and non-perishable groceries, as well as gently used clothing. In addition, new items such as blankets, knit hats, gloves, and personal hygiene have been provided at various times. This year, donations of new tube socks are being sought.
